New Mexico Crisis and Access Line	Psychology (PSY), Counseling and Ed Psychology (CEP), Counseling and Guidance (CG), School Psychology (SPSY), Social Work (MSW), School Psychology (SCHP), Counseling Psychology (CEP)	ProtoCall was founded in 1992 as a division of Metro Crisis Intervention Services, a non-profit agency providing crisis line services. The initial goal was to leverage the existing 24/7 infrastructure and professional staffing to create an additional funding source to help support the agency's local crisis programs. In 1997, ProtoCall Services was incorporated as a separate entity and has since expanded into a sophisticated 24-hour behavioral health contact center service used by more than 250 organizations nationwide and responding to more than 500,000 calls annually. Certainly much has changed since 1992, but just like the founders at Metro Crisis, our fundamental mission of providing immediate access in times of crisis remains the core of our work.

Alaska General Seafoods

Alaska General Seafoods ("AGS") is a shore-based seafood processor who acquires, cans, freezes or provides fresh seafood products to wholesale buyers from around the world. Headquartered in Kenmore, Washington, Alaska General Seafoods (AGS) operates two major processing plants in the state of Alaska. In terms of seafood volume, both plants are located in the top 20 U.S. seafood ports. One plant is located in Southeast Alaska (city of Ketchikan) and the other in South Western Alaska (city of Naknek). The plants operate on a seasonal basis during late spring through the summer time.

At the peak of the fishing season AGS procures wild Alaskan salmon and herring from hundreds of independent fishermen. AGS continues to be a major sockeye salmon processor and has recently expanded its processing operation in the growing value-added frozen salmon fillet and skinless and boneless canned salmon markets."

AGS employs more than 700 people in all of their shore-side operations. During the fishing season, AGS procures wild Alaskan salmon and herring from hundreds of independent fishermen. AGS continues to be a major sockeye salmon processor and has recently expanded its processing operation in the growing value-added frozen salmon fillet and skinless and boneless canned salmon markets.
